#	Response
1	airliner tablet-I use it on a daily basis to write down what students say in class, to do example problems, to give notes, etc. I like the fact that I can walk around the room and not be stuck at the whiteboard.
2	I use the clickers to review before a test
3	I use my Airliner/computer/projector to display virtual labs/demonstrations when I do not have the hardware to do the demonstration in class. I also use this combination to show films, video clips, and web sites that enhance the material presented in class/labs.
4	I use the Elmo camera for Lab debriefing. I will show materials used in lab and discuss with students learning outcomes
5	LCD - to show PPT, to show student work, to display lab examples and data for discussion, for united streaming, to display digital photos of work or students.
6	CPS--as a form of formative assessment to monitor progress.
7	Clickers are used often for informal assessment in guaging the progress of the class as a whole.
8	I update my website everyday with what was covered in class that day and homework assignments posted.
9	I use the elmo almost every day to display diagrams in textbook and other graphical images. I also use it to work problems on the board. For example, I will display graph paper on my white board and draw on the graph on my white board.
10	Today my students shared a creative project using the Elmo so that everyone could see their paper.
11	I use the projector to show video clips and power points often.
